For The 1974 Edition Marcel Dekker Inc. pdf Q: dataset fire event when has been changed in the database I have a dataset that I process, and want to be able to detect when the dataset has been updated or changed by a user. The only thing I can see is that the dataset has a property on it called Modified. When I set this and then raise an event, the event is raised, but contains a Null event value, and the Modified property is Null. How can I detect when a record has been changed, or if the dataset is now up-to-date? A: I'm guessing you are using DataSets with DataVisualization components. If this is the case, you should be using the Updating event instead. The Modified property will contain the old value of the column you changed and the DataVisualization components will redraw themselves to show you the changed column. Q: MongoDB $lookup remove duplicate data I have two collections in MongoDB - cars and people. The goal is to get for every car the name of all its people. This is how the data looks like: cars { _id: 1, name: "BMW", people: [1, 2, 3, 4] } { _id: 2, name: "Mercedes", people: [3, 4] } { _id: 3, name: "Audi", people: [1, 2, 3] } people { _id: 1, name: "John", } { _id: 2, name: "Jenny", } { _id: 3, name
